

24 – hour safety and security advice worldwide

Maldwyn Worsley-Tonks MBE

Maldwyn was red24's Director of Special Risks for several years and is now the company's CEO, responsible for the day-to-day running of the company and the management team.

Maldwyn has over 30 years of experience in the military and security sphere. Prior to joining the commercial sector, Maldwyn spent 20 years in the British Army, serving in a number of locations around the world. He retired as Lieutenant Colonel, having commanded a battalion in the Parachute Regiment. Maldwyn was awarded an MBE in 1990 for his service in Hong Kong, where he oversaw border security and coordinated humanitarian relief efforts for regional crises.

Since his move into the commercial sector, Maldwyn has acquired substantial expertise in examining and improving corporate security philosophies, procedures, systems and processes. He has an unparalleled reputation for developing robust contingency plans for business, particularly in terms of crisis management and evacuation contingencies.

Prior to joining red24, Maldwyn operated as an independent risk management consultant, providing a number of high-profile multinationals with risk assessment audits and security advice. He has extensive experience of Russia and West Africa, in particular, and of the tobacco, pharmaceutical and mineral extraction industries.
